

By Nicholas Kralev

http://washingtontimes.com/news/2010/jan/22/us-ratchets-up-pressure-on-china-over-censorship/?feat=home_headlines

Leonard A. Leo, chairman of the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom, said he hoped the secretary's speech will start bringing "human rights diplomacy into the 21st century."

"The use and restriction of new technology is a future religious freedom battleground, as governments use technology to monitor religious freedom activists and stifle the flow of religious information," he said.